The merchant Shadi was a greedy and selfish man, who always wished to get more and more money and never hesitated to deceive others in order to make money. He was also stingy and did not want anyone to share anything of his wealth with him, as he used to pay his servants very low wages and never pity anyone..

But do not worry, because one day he got a lesson that changed his entire life!

An illustration of a man with brown hair, wearing a grey jacket, shouting into a grey megaphone. He has a determined expression. The background is a bright red and orange flame. Large yellow numbers '50' are scattered around him. A speech bubble at the top left says 'Sorry,sir, we found no trace!'. A speech bubble at the bottom left says 'We turned the place upside down in vain!'. A blue speech bubble above his head says 'What...what...what?!'.

Sorry,sir, we found no trace!

What...what...what?!

We turned the place upside down in vain!

That happened when he lost a bag containing fifty golden coins, and although Shadi searched and searched and turned everything upside down, but all his efforts were in vain, and when the neighbors and friends learned about it, they believed that they were the heroes who would solve the problem, so they participated in the search, all of them self-confidence But soon everyone declared their failure and sank into their shame!

Two days later, Salam, the daughter of one of Shadi's workers, returned from the field, jumping with joy, hugging her father and shouting: "Dad, guess what happened today, you won't believe it!... You should be happy, Dad, because you are the father of the luckiest girl in the world!" The father nodded and said with a smile: "What do you mean, my daughter?" Salam replied, jumping with happiness: "Today we are rich, father! .. I found in the field among the plants a leather bag containing countless golden coins!!!"

But the father's face sank into pain before he said: "Actually, those golden coins are counted, my daughter. When you learn the numbers, you will know that they are fifty!". The father was silent for a while, then sat down and put his daughter Salam on his knee while gently stroking her hair, saying: "My daughter.. This is Mr. Shadi's money, which he has been missing for a while, and he is looking for it, and it is our duty to be honest and return all his money to him so that Allah will be pleased with us!"

The little girl was surprised and said sadly: "But I am the one who found them, my father. I was happy because I thought that we would become rich, and that you... would rest...".she was silent for a while before saying: " But yes, he will think that theh are lost forever, he will not know that we have them, what do you think, father??" The father's face reddened and he said firmly: "Never!!!.. This is forbidden money, and forbidden money leads its owners to Hell. Poverty - even if it is a torment - is easier than the torment of Hell, my daughter!!!". The girl lowered her head shyly and said: "Sorry, Dad.. Please do the right thing!"

The Messenger of Allah PBUH said
" The forbidden money goes, and its people "

It's my chance to force
him to give me another 25 coins!!

I'll catch him with my clutches!

Hahaha!!

The father smiled and set out with his little daughter to the merchant Shadi to return his money to him with pride, expecting that his little daughter would get a reward for her honesty. But instead, the merchant shoutwd angrily and beat the table with his fist snarling: "Where are the other 25 golden coins??", Salam shivered while the father answered surprised: "They are fifty coins, I counted them myself!!" The merchant liar replied, "Yes, fifty, and twenty-five remain.. They were seventy-five golden coins!!"

The father was shocked, but he tried to defend himself and his daughter to no avail. The merchant took them to the judge, claiming falsely before him that they were two thieves who stole twenty-five coins from his bag and left only fifty for him! Salam cried while saying: "Did you see, my father?!.. that honesty brought us evil, if we did not return that money to him, we would now be safe and from the rich!" But the father answered with faith and firmness: "My daughter, Allah knows that we are innocent and He will not let us down or leave us.. God will compensate us in this world or in the Hereafter.. Trust in your Lord, my dear!!"

I trust that Allah will compensate us!

Say: "O Lord", my daughter, say "O Lord"!

Dad!

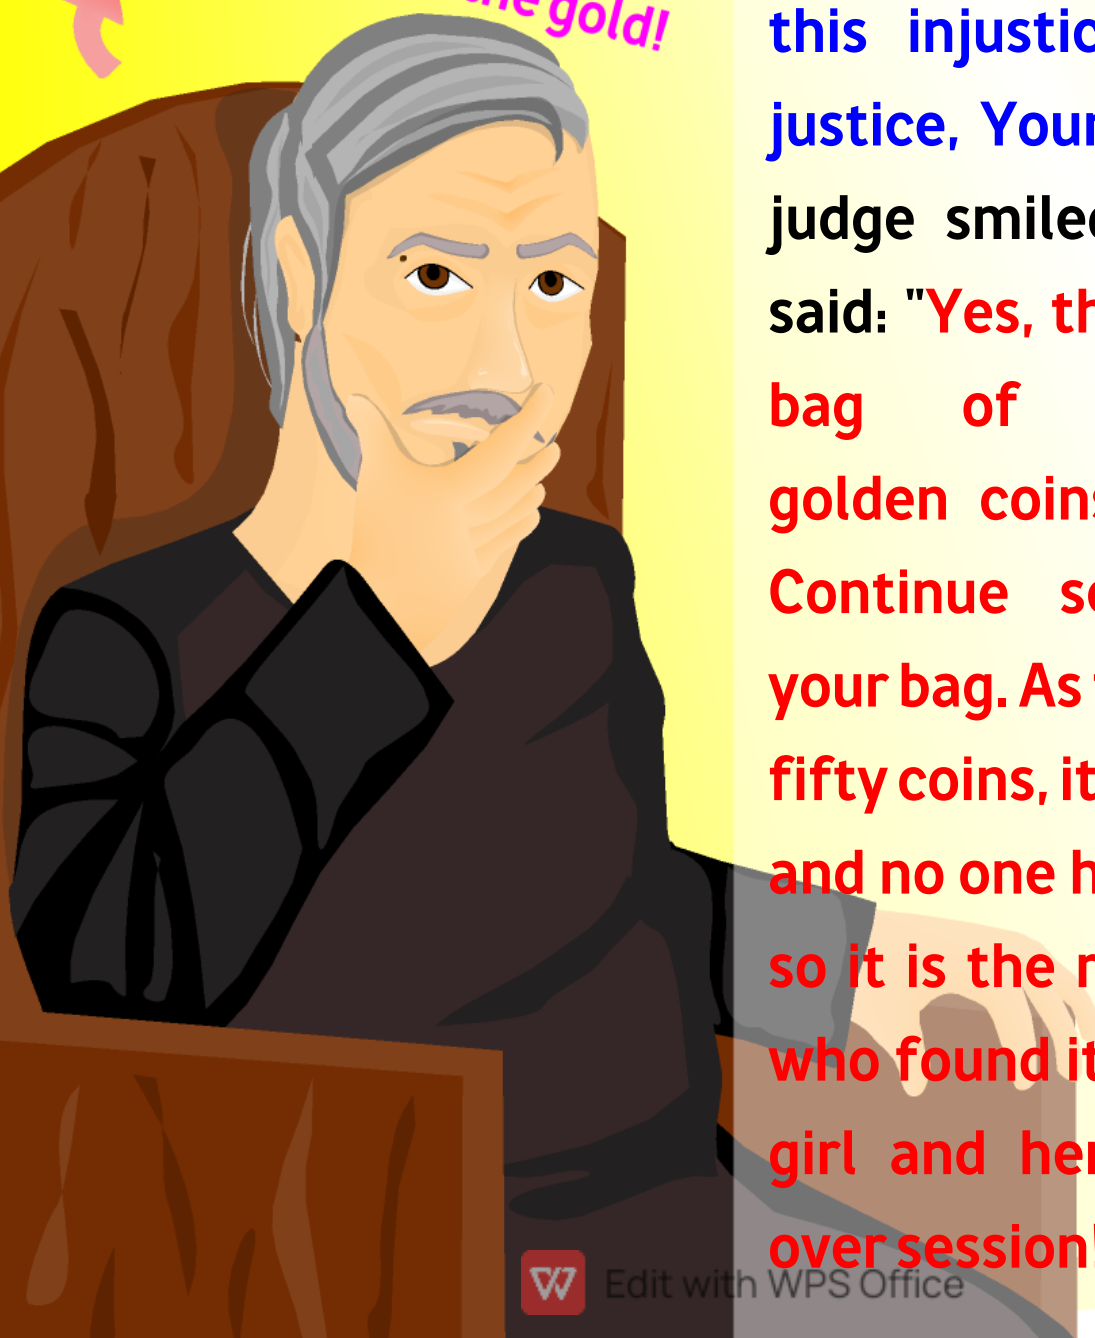

Lord, help me
establish the truth!

Instead of thanking them, he wants to inflict evil on them.
Doesn't he fear Allah?!

Is this the reward
for kindness?!

They are obviously poor, yet they give him back the gold!

At that moment, the judge scratched his beard, then said: "I understand.. I understand.. This is indeed an obvious case (very simple), merchant!" So the merchant rubbed his hands greedily, saying: "It is true, sir. Please rid us of this injustice with your justice, Your Honor!" The judge smiled simply and said: "Yes, this is not your bag of seventy-five golden coins, merchant.. Continue searching for your bag. As for this bag of fifty coins, it has no owner and no one has claimed it, so it is the right of those who found it, who are the girl and her father.. It's over session!"

The merchant opened his mouth in astonishment and tried in vain to speak to the judge, but the guards pushed him away while the judge began to listen to the next case. He stand still watching the father and his daughter going out while enjoying the tones of gold, Salam was jumping and singing: "Vivre justice.. vivre justice.. Allah didn't let us down..Our Lord saved us.. Our Lord saved us!.. Ha.. Ha!!".. The merchant stood with humiliation and regret because he lied and coveted more money even though they were Forbidden, so he lost his fifty money before his eyes.. From that moment on, Shadi learned a lesson that he did not forget; He no longer cheats or deceives anyone, but rather treats others with trustworthy and honesty!!!
